First Lord's Resistance Army Suspect to Appear in the Hague

The transfer of a Lord's Resistance Army (LRA) commander to the International Criminal Court (ICC) is an important opportunity to achieve a measure of justice for crimes committed by the rebel group, Human Rights Watch said today. Dominic Ongwen arrived in the Netherlands on January 21, 2015, to face charges of four counts of war crimes and three counts of crimes against humanity committed in 2004 in northern Uganda. Read more

Uganda Positions Itself for a New Anti-Gay Law

After the Ugandan Constitutional Court struck down the 2013 anti-homosexuality act, the LGBT community could catch its breath. But now a group of legislators is pursuing a new law - which will once again test both the community and the country's politicians. Read more

Besigye, Sejusa, Muntu, Mao, Otunnu, Mbapazi

Can they unite to beat Museveni? Read more

Low Global Oil Prices Could Affect Uganda's Prospects

Uganda's progress in the oil sector could be negatively affected if global oil prices continue to fall, a financial expert has said. Read more

Internet Still Too Costly - Minister

Individual Merit Hangover Affecting Civil Society

Are Artistes Losing Confidence in Local Video Producers?

Brace Yourself for a More Musical, Digital 2015

Politics

First Lord's Resistance Army Suspect to Appear in the Hague

The transfer of a Lord's Resistance Army (LRA) commander to the International Criminal Court (ICC) is an important opportunity to achieve a measure of justice for crimes committed by the rebel group, Human Rights Watch said today. Dominic Ongwen arrived in the Netherlands on January 21, 2015, to face charges of four counts of war crimes and three counts of crimes against humanity committed in 2004 in northern Uganda. Read more

Uganda Positions Itself for a New Anti-Gay Law

After the Ugandan Constitutional Court struck down the 2013 anti-homosexuality act, the LGBT community could catch its breath. But now a group of legislators is pursuing a new law - which will once again test both the community and the country's politicians. Read more

Besigye, Sejusa, Muntu, Mao, Otunnu, Mbabazi

Can they unite to beat Museveni? Read more

Economy

URA Hits Half Year Target With U.S. $8.6 Million Surplus

Uganda Revenue Authority has reported a surplus of Ush24.26 billion (about $8 million) after it collected Ush4, 568.44 billion surpassing their target of Ushs4, 544.17 billion. Read more

Low Global Oil Prices Could Affect Uganda's Prospects - Analyst

Uganda's progress in the oil sector could be negatively affected if global oil prices continue to fall, a financial expert has said. Read more

Italians Win Uganda Solar Energy Project

A Ugandan-Italian consortium Simba Telecom/Building Energy SPA and the consortium of Access/TSK Electronica of United Arab Emirates and Spain will invest $38million in two Solar Power Energy projects in Eastern Uganda. Read more

Regional Affairs

Conflict Gold Sold On International Markets Despite Sector Clean Up Says New UN Report

Gold smuggled out of the Democratic Republic of Congo, some from rebel areas, has been sold on the international market through Uganda and the United Arab Emirates in the past year, according to a report published yesterday by the United Nations. Read more
IGAD Agrees Policy On Water Sharing
Officials from the eight-nation Inter-Governmental Authority on Development [Igad], have agreed a policy to harmonize the sharing and management of inland water resources. Read more »

How Regimes Derive Legitimacy Through the Fight Against Terror
Terrorism has been gaining ground in sub-Saharan Africa in the last decade. This does not mean that terrorism was non-existent in the region before this (the Lord's Resistance Army was formed in Uganda in around 1986), but the formation per se of Sub Saharan organisations and their self-identification as terrorist groups is a relatively recent phenomenon. Read more »

Local Affairs

World Food Programme Forced to Cut Rations to Some 150,000 Refugees in Uganda
The ration cut of 50 percent, which began today, came as WFP struggles to raise an additional US$30 million for its operations in Uganda for the next six months. Read more »

Internet Still Too Costly - Minister
George William Nyombi Thembo is the minister of state for ICT. The ministry was formed nine years ago to steward the growth of the ICT sector, which has become pivotal to doing business in Uganda. Read more »

Individual Merit Hangover Affecting Civil Society
As we close 2014, and looking back on the meaning of civil society in Uganda, it is clear to me that a number of political realities that may seem forgotten today do influence the ways in which civil society works. Read more »

Media, Arts and Education

Are Artistes Losing Confidence in Local Video Producers?
Almost all trending music videos are works of foreign producers Read more »

Brace Yourself for a More Musical, Digital 2015
It is 2015 already and we are rubbing our hands together with glee at the arts calendar. Read more »